answer to this test.

The third test to be applied is one of efficiency. This would cover all matters in regard to the conduct of the affairs of the organization. It should apply to the method of organization and supervision, composition of the board of management, financial operation and other business detail. There is no reason why scientific management should not be applied to social agencies as well as commercial and industrial.

Consolidation of Influences.

So far I have endeavored to bring before you the ideals upon which the new philanthropy is based, as well as the ideas and plans of the builders and the tests being applied toward their structures. This new profession realizes today that, because of the specialization going on in its own ranks as well as in the ranks of other professions, cooperation is necessary to success. Philosophically we divide man into three watertight compartments—body, mind and spirit. In practice it is hard to make these divisions. More and more it is being realized that a diseased body or mind will affect the attitude of an individual toward life and his fellowmen, hence the theologian must cooperate with the physician. The salvation of this world is dependent upon no one institution or profession. Salvation must come through the cooperation of the various agencies of society as well as the various professions. The sanitarian, the engineer, the teacher, the business man and the mechanic are as indispensable to society as the divine or social worker. This of course means cooperation and without it we would have chaos.

In order to present to you in a concrete way the need of cooperation, permit me to bring before you a case taken from the records of the Settlement in which it is my good fortune to be a worker.

Some three years ago a man was sent to me by one of our prominent lawyers, suffering from valvular disease of the heart. He had a wife and six children dependent on him. After a few minutes' talk with the man I realized he needed immediate relief and treatment. I visited his home and found his family destitute. In order to treat this family it was necessary to call upon several institutions and professions. The children needed medical attention; nurses and doctors had to be asked to help. The family needed bedding, which the Associated Charities supplied. A fraternal organization furnished the funds with which to fit out the oldest boy with a necessary suit of clothes, so that he could go to work. The Y. M. C. A. furnished him with a free scholarship in its evening school. The Castle Home took care of the younger children. Central Union church furnished the funds for rent and food for the wife who was unable to work. I will not trouble you with all the details, but simply state that the others called upon to help treat this case were the judge of the juvenile court, the city and county alienist, the boys' industrial school, one of our lawyers, employers of labor, one steamship agency and the newspapers. I cite this case not to arouse your sympathy—there is no need of that—but to show how necessary cooperation is among the various professions as well as the agencies working for the common good.

The old idea of competition of independence is fast dying among social workers. They realize that by themselves they cannot save humanity and hence are being driven not only to mutual helpfulness and endeavor, but to cooperation with other professions as well.

Three Plans Available.
I am concerned, however, for the present, chiefly with co-operation among our philanthropists. Here in Honolulu we have not had this to any extent. We have failed to pattern after the chief industry of our Territory and consequently our results have not been as large or good. There are three ways in which this cooperation may be brought about. First, it may be a voluntary coming together of the various workers, as in social clubs and in discussions of problems. Cities like Boston, Chicago and others have such organizations. The various individuals and institutions in these cities realized the danger of isolation and have adopted this method of mutual helpfulness and benefit. These organizations are strong and exert a powerful influence in their communities. They have undertaken surveys and mapped out a definite program of work for a series of years.

The second method by which the social work of a city may be coordinated is through the state boards of charities. This is governmental control and is sometimes distasteful, because of politics.

The third method is that adopted by those who furnish the funds for the conduct of philanthropic work. The city of Cleveland, Ohio, is probably the best example of this method. The Chamber of Commerce of this city, realizing the need of coordination and supervision of its charities, at first adopted the plan of appointing a committee called the committee on benevolent associations. To it was committed the task of passing upon all applications for funds for charitable purpose. Without a card of endorsement from this committee, it was not possible to raise funds in Cleveland. This led to the strengthening of organizations that were found to be doing a good work and to the elimination of unnecessary ones. Fake soliciting of funds, duplication of work and petty jealousies have been largely eliminated. The city has the benefit of knowing that its sympathy is not wasted and the giving of unnecessary money is largely stopped. Cleveland has since determined upon a larger plan.

Local Action Suggested.

What has all this to do with our city and our conditions? It is very little comfort to us to know what cities are doing unless we profit by their experience. We have here in Honolulu a great many philanthropic organizations and institutions. You gentlemen are called upon to support these, you have therefore the right to ask whether you are getting full return for the money you give. You have a right to know to what end this money is being expended, just as you have a right to know whether the methods used are efficient.

It is not time that the old hit and miss methods of administering the philanthropies of our city be abandoned and some definite plan adopted? As a start I would suggest that we gather some facts about our city. This is very necessary if we are to ever understand our problems and apply the necessary remedies. "Know Honolulu" should be our motto. We should know the conditions under which the masses of our people live and work; we should know the evils to which they are exposed; we should know the causes which tend towards criminality, pauperism and disease. In hand with this study should go a study of our institutions. Are they meeting the needs of our conditions? Are they doing too much or too little? I link these two together, because they are inseparable.

The study should be an extensive rather than an intensive one. I know of no organization better fitted to promote such a study than the Chamber of Commerce. With the authority of the Chamber back of him, an investigator would be able to get at facts such as would not be possible otherwise.

Some tentative form of supervision could be undertaken by the Chamber while the study is being made, and after the facts are gathered a more definite scheme could be substituted, not only of supervision but of work to be undertaken in the future.

All of this will involve a great deal of education not only of the organizations in the field but of the donors as well. It will take time, thought, energy and money. Results are not to be looked for in a day or year. Let me remind you in closing of the statement of John Stuart Mill, that, "when the object is to raise the permanent conditions of a people, small means do not merely produce small effects, they produce no effects at all."

SHOULD BE PLEASANT TO TAKE.

"When a medicine must be given to young children it should be pleasant to take. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is made from loaf sugar, and the roots used in its preparation gives it a flavor similar to maple syrup, making it pleasant to take. It has no superior for colds, croup and whooping cough. For sale by all dealers. Benson, Smith & Co., agents for Hawaii.
